SESSION SUMMARY

MORNING

SITE I (spring/oasis in Kenya)

..... flat, vast, land..... feeling of semi-soft....
at first not sure whether sand, dirt, marsh, etc...
..... colors were dominated by greens and blues.....

SITE II (sand dunes near Gulf of Mexico)

..... there were ups and downs.... the feeling was soft,
but still having trouble with sand and water

SITE III (exposed reef near Bahama Islands)

..... feeling of hard, high verticals, angles.....
.... suspect no site contact

AFTERNOON

SITE I (Diamond Head on the island of Oahu, HI)

.... hard, natural, rugged..... vertical ups..... vertical downs..... up and over....

SITE II (Buenos Aires, Argentina)

.... initial feeling of up, vertical, hard.... colors of grays
and bluish gray.... then a feeling of down and curving up... in the curve there was a feeling of something white and grainy, but not snow.... then a feeling of vertical again, vertical up, vertical up, and vertical with a right angle across (structure/structures)..... away from the verticals
the color green dominated.

OVERALL: The morning sessions seemed rather hit-and-miss. The afternoon sessions would appear to be more "together". I definitely felt a great deal of cognition when trying to locate the <sup>contingent</sup> of Site II.... When trying to perceive the world location, the ~~country~~ was correct, but the location within the continent was totally off, however.
